

Bazooka Platinum Iron-wood - Getting The Tour Edge

Easy To Hit - Even Easier To Try

By Leonard Finkel

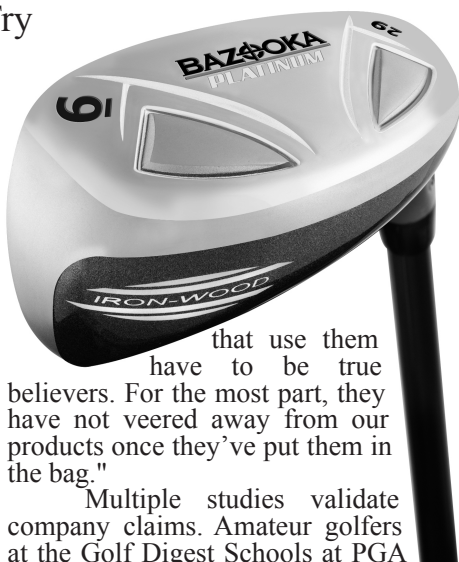

Imagine being able to hit your 3-iron as easily as a 7-iron. With the Bazooka Platinum Iron-Wood hybrid, you can. Available individually or as a complete iron set, the club's advanced technology make it an ideal iron replacement. Iron-Woods make it easy to hit long, high shots that stop quickly on the green.

We all want more distance and need more forgiveness; Iron-Wood hybrids deliver both. For added forgiveness, two heavy tungsten weights have been placed in the sole positioning more weight below the ball, making them the easiest irons to hit in golf. Tour Edge combines a lightweight, super-thin, forged crown and a hypersteel body making it easy to tackle difficult lies on the golf course. Whether you're in a bunker, deep rough or have a tight lie, the easy-to-hit Bazooka Platinum clubs will get you out. Normally these shots are difficult for traditional long irons, making Iron-Woods the perfect replacement. Its thin crown allows 20 grams of weight to be added to the sole, dramatically lowering the club's center of gravity to launch the ball higher to land softly on the green. For enhanced distance, the face is thinned and incorporates three internal reinforcement bars for durability.

Tour Edge was one of the first companies to introduce hybrid technology and has forged a trusted name as a producer of high-quality clubs. Every set is hand-assembled in the USA one at a time, yet sold at unbeatable prices. Featuring a truly progressive design, the Platinum long irons are shaped larger and more hybrid-like and the scoring clubs are thinner and resemble more traditional irons. The set is extremely playable no matter what distance you have to the flag.

Independent Validation - PGA Tour Success

Acceptance of hybrids has snowballed, even among PGA Tour players. In these days of pay for play on the PGA Tour, it's almost impossible for midsize companies to get their clubs in the hands of players. Tour Edge rep Andy Harris says, "The way contracts are written these days with the big-name companies, there aren't many players open to play other clubs, but our progress has been steady and sure. Since we pay no money to put clubs in play, players that use them have to be true believers. For the most part, they have not veered away from our products once they've put them in the bag."

Multiple studies validate company claims. Amateur golfers at the Golf Digest Schools at PGA National Resort & Spa tested the Tour Edge hybrids versus the clubs they're designed to be interchangeable with. Golf Digest wrote, "On average, shots from hybrids outperform their long-iron counterparts in distance and accuracy. About two of every three shots hit with hybrids flew further than those hit with the corresponding iron." The article goes on to say, "Furthermore, hybrids on average were nearly 8 ft. closer to the target line. The hybrid hits were closer to the target line an average of three out of every four shots."

Golfers now have the option of mixing and matching hybrid and traditional clubs from a 1-iron through assorted wedges. These clubs are ideal for players of all skill levels. While better players may only replace their longer irons, based on performance benefits, mid to high handicappers may choose to go with an entire set. Lou Dionese (Carlsbad, CA) boasts, "I'm 81 now and hitting the ball better than ever with Tour Edge Iron-Woods. I don't know anyone that wouldn't improve with these clubs. They're fantastic!"
