

Explosive Distance Off the Tee

Golfers Gain Up to 40 Yards More

Golf can be very frustrating, especially for golfers struggling with distance issues. Are you looking to recover lost yardage or seeking to add significant distance off the tee? I believe I've found the answer to your prayers. It's the Polara "Advantage" driver. Polara Golf's new drivers are designed to drive the ball farther than any other club on the market because they have gone beyond design limits golf companies adhere to in order to make clubs that can be used by PGA Tour players.

Polara is building clubs enabling recreational golfers to hit the ball up to 40 yards farther. These oversized clubs are engineered to launch the ball higher and faster than other drivers, while also providing an extra-large sweet spot for more forgiveness and power on off-center hits. They are intended for any golfer whose #1 priority is achieving significantly more distance off the tee.

Why are these drivers longer? The primary advantages come from an ultra thin beta titanium face and larger 475cc head size, versus the USGA limit of 460. Beta titanium is a more expensive but stronger alloy, which means the face can be made thinner, delivering a more enhanced trampoline effect. This translates into higher ball velocity, producing longer distance off the tee. The larger head delivers a higher moment of inertia because the center of gravity is moved farther back. This combination also means greater forgiveness on off-center hits

User Testimonials

Though the product was just recently released in limited quantities, it already has an almost cult-like following, many of whom have sent testimonials to the company.

William Yaeger (Penfield, NY) wrote, "I bought the new Polara Advantage driver and not only am I getting 15-25 MORE yards per average but I've had many mis-hits forgiven by this driver. Especially off the toe."

John Voros (Marshfield, WI) wrote, "I bought a Polara driver in May. Holy Man!!!! It was like I went back in time to my 20's (I am 52). I was driving the ball 275-300 plus yards. Golf is fun again. Thanks."

The Advantage driver is designed to work with any golf ball but it works especially well with Polara's own anti-slice balls. The combination of distance and accuracy technology is nothing short of a miracle. I personally know people that had quit the game because it was so tough and frustrating but have begun playing again using Polara equipment. One such player is Tom Matthews (San Marcos, CA). Tom used to slice the ball so badly it would curve a country mile right. He became a timid golfer, driving no more than 200 yards. Tom said, "I stopped playing altogether because the game was no longer fun. When I heard about Polara golf equipment I was skeptical, but I decided to give it a try. I took out the Polara 12° driver and I hit a Polara Ultimate Straight ball as hard as I could. I added at least 60 yards to my drives. Using the Polara ball in combination with their driver, I stopped worrying about my slice and was able to swing freely. Polara has made the game fun again, improved my scores and now I am playing once a week."

Polara drivers are available in four models. Find out which one will deliver the added distance you need.

David Moody (Louisville, KY) said, "I have no doubt the Advantage driver has added length to my drives. I have gone from the short knocker to one of the longer drivers in our group. With the driver and the XD balls I have not lost a ball in the last several rounds. In fact the balls are getting beat up to the point I have to replace them." Polara equipment is designed for the vast majority of golfers who want to take advantage of technology improvements and have more fun.

"We're not trying to remove skill from the game," said Polara's David Felker. "We're just trying to remove the frustration."
